CALL FOR SUBMISSIONS

JOURNAL OF CAMPUS BEHAVIORAL INTERVENTION

The National Behavioral Intervention Team Association (www.nabita.org) will publish the 3rd volume of its peer-reviewed academic journal, The Journal of Campus Behavioral Intervention (J-BIT) in November 2015. J-BIT is intended to encourage academic research and scholarship regarding the function, design, operation, and assessment of campus Behavioral Intervention Teams (BITs) at two- and four-year colleges and universities. All published articles undergo an extensive review by top BIT scholars and practitioners on the editorial board.

J-BIT* is a multi-disciplinary journal; the only limitation on subjects is that the article must relate to campus BIT concerns. Journal articles fall into one of these four categories:

- Threat Assessment manuscripts may include information related to direct communicated threat, threat assessment strategies and theory, social media threat, workplace violence, new practices in threat assessment, application to specific populations (law enforcement, student conduct, counseling, residential life) and/or risk factors for violence.
- Case Study manuscripts should facilitate dialogue among those practicing behavioral intervention and illustrate important aspects of BIT functioning. Case studies that encourage discussion among team members and advance team communication are preferred.
- Research submissions should explore issues related to BIT development, advertising, evaluation, and/or operations. Research manuscripts may include survey data, reviews of current practice, and meta-analysis of multiple BITs, and more traditional quantitative or qualitative analysis of current practice or BIT operation as it applies to special populations.
- Innovative Practice submissions may include issues related to team formation, advertising, team leadership and size, team scope (student/faculty/staff), record keeping and documentation, case management, budget and funding and referral source development.
